About the session:

The session started with a small introduction on Financial analysis and planning are one of the fundamental activities and responsibilities for the finance department. Financial analysis and planning help an organization in achieving strategic tasks and objectives within available resources. The key responsibility of the financial analysis and planning team is to facilitate management in formulating short and long-term objectives, carrying out cost-benefit analysis and ensuring targets are met through periodic reviews. Another responsibility is to ensure that management's actions create profitability for the organization by providing relevant financial information. Financial analysis and planning are essentially divided into four parts: forecasting, budgeting, reporting and analysis.

The session continued with the detailed discussion on Forecasting, Budgeting, Reporting and Analysis.
