Grammarly is a cloud-based support that reviews language issues including spelling, punctuation, and delivery mistakes. It further also helps users to change their style, tone, and context-specific language.

In a university, students and faculty members are expected to enhance their academic writing skills. They are required to write research papers, reports and document their research activities. An error free write-up is always required for this. Thus, Grammarly is a handy platform, where the users get suggestions on their writing skills. Based on the suggestions, they need to change and improve their write-ups.

Keeping these needs into consideration, Grammarly training was offered to the faculty and students of Centurion University of Technology and Management in 15 December 2019, where around 400 participants were involved in the training.

The following key areas of focus were discussed in the training.

1. Academic writing conventions- Some typical errors
2. Grammarly as a platform- Its uses
3. How to use Grammarly for better academic writing-

The trainer from Grammarly provided hands-on activities in order to make the participants realise the significance of the platform. The activities include participants writing a few paragraphs and taking the help of Grammarly for improvement.

Grammarly was very helpful for the participants as they realise how significant it is to self-evaluate. Further, this helped the participants to save time in writing and making them more 'autonomous'.

The following page provides a few snapshots of the event.
