There is a shortage of leadership everywhere. Leaders are unprepared to lead effectively. In this fast-changing and disruptive environment, command and control structures fail. Leaders are expected to act on incomplete or insufficient information.

3. Prof. Puteri Sofia Amirnuddin, Taylor's University, Malaysia

Prof. Puteri Sofia Amirnuddin

Profile

Puteri Sofia Amirnuddin read law at University of Tasmania in 2008 and continued reading law at Monash University, Australia where she was conferred with Master of Laws in 2010. She was subsequently called to the Malaysian Bar in 2012 and her passion in research and education has brought her into academia. She is currently a Senior Law Lecturer and a Programme Director for Master of Laws programmes at Taylor's University.

The 1990 coinage describing the surrounding environment as volatile, uncertain, complex and agile is becoming a cliché in the absence of a more profound analysis. To try and uncover its causes would take a comprehensive study that covers multiple areas such as economy, sociology, psychology, history, etc. and that cannot be covered in just few pages.

4. Mr. Bhabani Sankar Jena, Founder & CEO, DxMinds Technologies Inc., U.S.A.

Bhabani Sankar Jena

Bhabani is the Founder and CEO of DxMinds, a global digital transformation technology company having head office at San Francisco, USA and branch offices in India, UAE, Australia and Peru. Assumption is that by depicting the overt aspects of the phenomena, possible solutions may emerge in the form of a general action plan. Hence, the potential flaw of the ideas to be expressed: the general aspects need to be adapted and matched to specific environments, which hopefully becomes possible should a specific mindset be assumed via the a forementioned action framework.
