The writer's need to express thoughts and sentiments through writing is more important than the constrictive requirements of factual accuracy and logical progression in expository writing. Students from many departments took part in this competition. The subjects for the students' essays were provided. This contest was one of several entertaining contests that provided students with a stage to practice expressing their thoughts and opinions in various contexts. Students were able to understand topics, expand their vocabulary, spell better, and utilize proper English thanks to this competition. Students could write more skillfully as a result.
